Power Up Your PLC: Learner-Centric Teacher Teams

Collective efficacy is one of the most influential factors in fueling student achievement. Does your staff collaboration build individual and collective capacity or do your teams meet out of compliance? Are your PLCs getting results?

Does your data analysis align to standards, CAASPP, and accountability measures? Do you use data to empower your staff to find creative solutions that engage students in learning? Explore these questions and more at this full-day workshop focused on building capacity through collaborative teams. Rejuvenate your staff through a strengths-based approach that builds teacher ownership of the work and fosters intrinsic motivation. Learn to focus on ALL students, not just the “bubble kids”. Look at data differently via protocols and frameworks to fuel formative feedback in this age of complex assessment.
