Tulare County Office of Education Announces: Collaborative Leadership Institute Selects Third Group of Emerging Leaders in Children's Services

The Collaborative Leadership Institute – a project of the Tulare County Office of Education funded by First Five of Tulare County – announces the selection of its third cohort of emerging children's services leaders. Founded in 2000, the Institute's mission is to ensure the continuing vitality of the community of children service providers in Tulare County by identifying and developing emerging leaders, and motivating them to work together. The Institute's primary goals are to improve coordination and collaboration, provide succession planning, and to advance programs that impact young children in Tulare County. The Collaborative Leadership Institute is directed by Barry Sommer, Educational Psychologist, MFT, who also directs School/Community Development for Lindsay USD, and the Student Assistance Program at Porterville College.

“With this class of participants, we will have trained over 40 young leaders in the field of children's services,” says Tulare County Superintendent of Schools Jim Vidak. “Twenty to
