Veteran early childhood education teacher completes NTLD's Framework in Teaching and pursues her teaching credential

After 42 years of working in early childhood education programs in a variety of roles, Melinda Anderson wanted to get her teaching credential. In order to qualify for a credential program, Anderson was required to complete the Framework for Teaching program – a pre-service requirement by the state Commission on Teacher Credentialing (CTC).

For credential candidates without a foundation in education, Framework for Teaching provides coursework in general pedagogy, including classroom management and planning, reading/language arts, subject-specific pedagogy, human development, and specific content regarding teaching English learners. Candidates must pass all Framework for Teaching courses or equivalent coursework from a CTC-accredited program to be considered intern credential eligible.

“Going back to school at 59 has its challenges,” Anderson laughed. “I was scared and a little unsure if I had made the right decision. After Frameworks, I have no doubts that I made the right decision.” Last spring, Anderson completed Framework for Teaching, which is offered by TCOE’s New Teacher & Leadership Development (NTLD) program. This fall, she entered NTLD’s IMPACT Intern Program to earn her education specialist credential.

Today, Anderson works as an itinerant special education teacher for Visalia Unified School District. She provides in-class services to students in general education settings. One morning last month, Anderson visited Crowley Elementary School to work with a preschool student, reading together “The Very Hungry Caterpillar.” With patience and enthusiasm, she encouraged him to identify and say the objects on each page.

“Frameworks absolutely prepared me for my current position as a special education preschool teacher,” Anderson said. “Administrators and teachers made themselves available, supported, and encouraged me every step of the way, and they believed in me. I truly felt prepared to be a teacher. If they said they would make time for me, they absolutely did. When I was scared, they eased my fears. I never ever felt alone.”

The next virtual information meeting for the IMPACT Intern Program is Wednesday, January 21 at 4:30 p.m. To register, visit <https://tcoe.org/NTLD/IMPACT>.
